Every school has a tribute, a memorial if you will, of their great athletic lineage. Whether it is a trophy case or a board plastered with photos and uniforms of the past, these images and notable accomplishments of young athletes in their prime are almost always a feature in every school. Ridgewood High School is no different.

With a new athletic facility being built, an opportunity to change the way these memories and accomplishments were displayed presented itself. DLA Architects Ltd. and Graphic Designer / Photographer Alexander Romanovsky decided this undertaking should be unique.

In the past, Ridgewood adorned the walls of their building with outstanding Ridgewood Athletes dating back to the 1960s. Alumni continually visit the school and would see their faded picture hung behind a shield of Plexiglas, being susceptible to future degrading and fading of these precious memories.

This previous hodgepodge of weathered black and white photos has now been scanned, digitally repaired and infused into highly durable iZone Imaging CHPL (custom high pressure laminate) panels in a sleek new time-line layout.

iZone Imaging's CHPL is scratch and fade resistant, easy to maintain, and is perfect for high traffic areas like the bustling halls of the high school. And iZone Imaging's ten year warranty ensures that these memorial graphics panels will be appreciated by many new students and alumni of Ridgewood High School in the coming years.

"iZone met and exceeded my and my client's expectations regarding quality of material, workmanship, price range, packaging and delivery. We are looking forward to continuing our relationship with iZone Imaging on future projects." - Alexander Romanovsky: Graphic Designer / Staff Photographer
